NEW ROAD PLAN

Hitting hard at the proposal of Director of Public Works Earl Lee Kelly to have the state take over all county roads, the County Supervisors Association of California will place the plan under heavy fire at its convention next week in Sacramento.

This was foreshadowed in a statement by W. O. Russell of Davis, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Supervisors Association. Executive and legislative committees of the Association met in Sacramento last Friday and Saturday and passed strong resolutions opposing Kelly's plans for centralized state control of all roads. These resolutions are expected to receive unanimous endorsement at the convention, to be held March 6, 7, and 8 at Sacramento.

POLITICAL MACHINE

"It is the general opinion among supervisors that this scheme of the state taking over all roads is nothing less than an attempt to establish a vast state political machine through a veritable dictatorship vested in the State Department of Public Works," Russell declared. "Claims about saving taxpayers $16,000,000 per biennium can not stand analysis. They are nothing but rubber figures stretched to make a point."

PROXY CLAIMS

"The fact is that no such sum can be saved unless highway construction and improvement is severely curtailed, which certainly should not be done in these times if it can possibly be avoided. Highway work is one of the most effective means of providing employment, and there is plenty of work still to be done before the highway system is completed."

DARK SECRET

"How Kelly can save such a sum as $16,000,000 each two years he does not reveal, except by the (Continued on Page 5)

Lamson Jury Selection Is Still In Air

SAN JOSE, Feb. 28.—UP—The wearisome task of selecting a jury to hear the second trial of David Lamson on charges of killing his wife was resumed tonight, after Judge Robert R. Syer ruled the jury had not been completed late today.

Eight men and four women were in the jury box when both defense and prosecution forces accepted them as jurors for the retrial this afternoon, eight days after start of the retrial.

Suddenly, Defense Attorney E. M. Rea announced that Lamson's counsel had discovered one of the jurors, P. T. Peabody, was related by marriage to John P. Fitzgerald, chief deputy district attorney. Judge Syer subsequently ruled that the defense was entitled to resume examination and challenging of the disputed juror. Both the defense and prosecution had five peremptory challenges each left from their original 20.

Only one name remained from the original venire of 150 called for duty in the trial.

OAKLAND, Feb. 28.—The strange deaths possibly by poison of two of his three wives resulted today in the apprehension of an East Bay man who is now in the Alameda county jail facing a murder charge.

The investigation, which resulted in his detention was precipitated by admissions of a young girl, who told of illicit relations after she had been employed to care for the man's four-year-old daughter following the sudden death of his third wife. The young housekeeper had undergone an illegal operation and had accused him of contributing to her delinquency.

IS IN CUSTODY

The man in custody is Louis Gosen, 31, of 1341 Ninety-sixth avenue, Oakland. The young girl, whose story started Oakland police and District Attorney Earl Warren to make the investigation is Mrs. Lydia Sanborn, 18, estranged from another man.

Playing a leading part in the mystery were Gosen's third wife Mrs. Laura Gosen, who died of November 21, 1934, in convulsions, and a strychnine bottle found beneath the home where she died and which Gosen admitted purchasing "to kill rats."

BODY IS EXHUMED

SEVENTEEN MEN RESCUED FROM FLAMING BOAT

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—UP—Seventeen men were rescued and one man believed drowned today when a navy launch suddenly exploded and caught fire off Yerba Buena Island, in San Francisco bay.

Benjamin Mathews, coxswain, San Francisco, was reported lost. Navy officials were certain he had been killed when he jumped from the launch, his clothing sheathed in flames from the explosion.

The launch was filled with sailors and workers on the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge, en route to Yerba Buena from Oakland. An engine backfire that shot into the craft's gasoline tanks, causing an explosion, was blamed for the accident. Only half an hour earlier the same launch had carried a group of children from the island to Oakland on their way to school.

Many of those in the launch at the time sustained severe burns and suffered from exposure. Hundreds of commuters watched rescue of men as ferry boats swarmed from their lanes to lend assistance.

Daniel Harkins, first class seaman, suffered first degree burns and effects of submersion in the mishap. None of the other men were believed to have sustained serious injuries, although all received brief hospital care.

The rescue was made by a navy tug, ferry boat tug and several

GOV. MERRIAM IN NEW PLEA FOR ROAD PLAN

An editorial in today's San Francisco Call says that the plan for a new highway system proposed by Governor Merriam is a "very important" one. The plan is to build a new highway system, which will be a "very important" one.

A careful study of the whole problem has convinced me that the present gasoline tax is adequate to pay all highway costs in California, provided the highways are consolidated under one central administration," the governor said.

"Any public undertaking that calls for an expenditure by the taxpayers of an amount in excess of $100,000 a day for 19 years surely must have a very important bearing on the basic interests and welfare of the people."

"These expenditures include $384,000,000 by the state, $467,000,000 by the counties and $414,000,000 by the cities. Many of these costs have been unnecessary or excessive because of duplication of effort and through the use of costly methods and equipment."

"In addition to his plan for the state to assume current road costs, the governor pointed out his plan calls for the assumption by the state of existing county highway bond interest and the redemption of special assessments and other obligations now representing a heavy burden on real estate owners."

Merriam further explained his plan called for doubling of the quarter cent allocation of gasoline tax funds to cities. In Los Angeles county, he said, "where automobile registration is heaviest, the 43 incorporated cities would receive a tremendous addition to their available street funds."

Yellow Peril Is Pictured By Ace Pilot

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—UP—Half a million armed Japanese are in this country and could form an army immediately in case of war, Roy W. Knabenshue, pioneer airship builder, charged today before the House military committee.

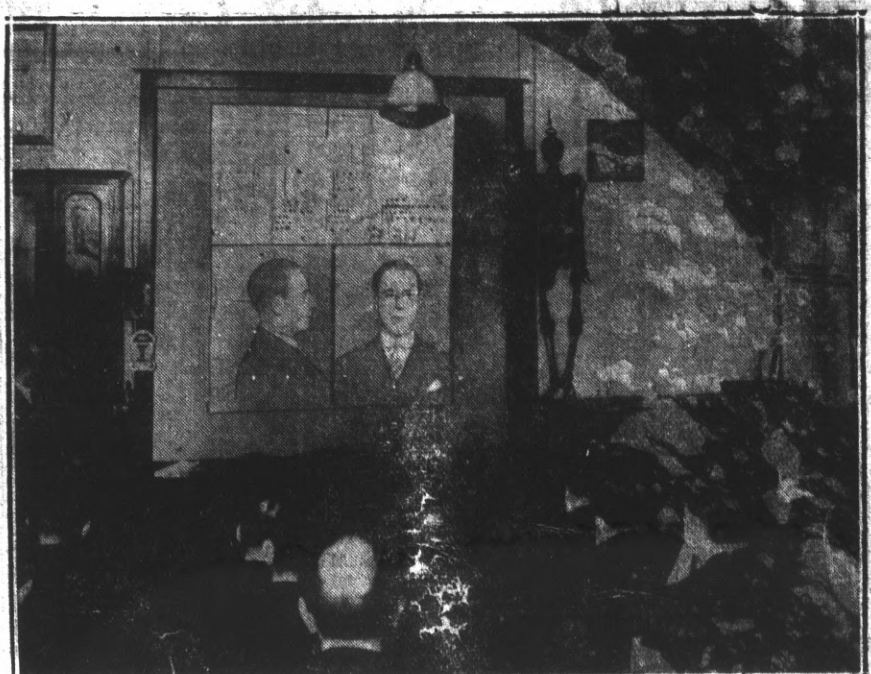

Under questioning, Knabenshue admitted that his belief was based entirely on hearsay, that he had no personal knowledge of the matter and that he had never seen an armed Japanese.

Knabenshue reiterated his previous charge that sabotage wrecked the Macon. He added that there are thousands of "Asiatics" aboard U. S. warships who "might do the same thing" to these ships as he contended was done to the Macon.

Rep. William L. Stroh, Democrat, committee chairman, added that it was "common talk in cloak rooms" that there were many Japanese taxi drivers in Washington who picked up as many fares as possible near the state, war and navy departments so that they might "listen in" on conversations and make reports to their government in Tokyo.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Probably the most important job tackled by the President during his Hyde Park rest was an inventory of the whys and wherefores of his trouble with the Senate.

Roosevelt and his inner council finally have become profoundly disturbed over the situation. And well they may be.

More than one President has come to grief through warring with an irate Senate. At stake is not only Roosevelt's work-relief program, but his social-security measure, plus the banking and holding corporation bills.

The President went to a great deal of trouble before leaving Washington to get some frank and realistic information as to the causes for his Senatorial troubles. And the consensus of view he took away with him to mull over were:

1. That he is urgently in need of more reliable and comprehensive information of what is going on in Congress. He is now dependent practically entirely on the Democratic floor leaders, who at heart are none too friendly to his legislative program.

2. That something must be done about Huey Long. He has Senators Joe Robinson and Pat Harrison, titular floor leaders, very much on the defensive and no one else has dared tackle him. As a result Huey has a free hand in warring on White House legislation.

3. That the President must not hesitate to fight openly and vigorously for his measures. Unless he does so, the Senate will wrest control of Congress from him and the chances are he will never regain it.

Roosevelt was reported to be strongly impressed by these suggestions. To at least one of his plain-spoken conferees he indicated that it was the first time he had received such advice. What he has decided to do now remains to be seen.

PWA ODDITIES

The New Deal's struggle for economic recovery has resulted in many strange incarnations. Here are a few projects on the PWA list:

A swimming pool for elephants for San Francisco's zoo. Collection of caterpillar eggs for feeding to a parasite in order to train it to eradicate caterpillars. Digging for buried treasure in New Jersey. Cultivation of the yucca plant. Destruction of grasshoppers. Making theatrical drops out of bed ticking—for a PWA drama project in New York City. The problem of the wage proposal which was discussed at the conference.

Such action after an announcement that Federal Relief Administrator Harry F. Hopkins had been compelled for the third time to get money from the PWA treasury to meet relief needs.

He got $50,000,000 today to finance relief for the first three weeks in March. Officials estimated there remained only approximately $50,000,000 in the bureau that Hopkins could use until the pending works bill or a straight dole measure is enacted.

SEEK COMPROMISE

Confronted by this situation all parties involved in the prevailing wage battle are working hard in an attempt to find a compromise acceptable to Mr. Roosevelt. McCarran met again today with Sen. Edward Costigan, D., Calif., Sen. Robert M. Wagner, D., N. Y., and Robert LaFollette, Wis., and discussed minor changes in the phraseology of the wage proposal which was submitted to labor of officials late today. If they accepted the revisions, the revised amendment will be turned over to Senate leaders for ultimate approval of the President.

Although the conferees were bound to secrecy, the United Press learned that the proposed changes in the amendment safeguard the principles of the prevailing wage even though in final form the two controversial words may not be included. Labor is willing to agree that Roosevelt shall have power to limit the hours of work of any man so that the payment of the prevailing wage would not give him a greater income than the average $56 monthly sought by the administration.

Such a compromise, it was pointed out, will give assurance that the wage law under the works program would not be increased to a point which the Administration fears would jeopardize the credit of the government.

New Deal Moves To Call Halt To All Defeats In Court

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—UP—The new deal hit upon a formula today for protecting its recovery and reform legislation from being shattered to pieces by adverse court rulings.

A Democrat and a Progressive Republican introduced a bill in House and Senate, which, if passed, would throw the protecting arm of the federal government around the Tennessee Valley Authority and frighten off many persons who would like to join the TVA from selling electric power in competition with private concerns.

Senator George Norris, R. Neb., and Rep. John W. Rankin, D. Miss., are the authors of the bill. Every since Federal Judge W. I. Grubb ruled in Birmingham, Ala., that the TVA could not sell power in competition with private concerns, these two men have been seeking some method to keep the project going. They are co-authors of the resolution that created TVA.

NEW PLAN TOLD
Today they came out with this plan, and promptly wrote it into a bill.

Anybody who wants to sue TVA must be willing to gamble a large amount of money that he will win. He must post a bond, guaranteeing that if he loses the suit he will reimburse TVA for the money. It is a gamble on the part of the money lost by not selling power while the case was being heard.

That bill is a long way from being a law. It must go through the weary legislative grind of committee hearings, debate in house and senate and approval by the President. But if it does become law, Norris and Rankin are confident that private concerns will think twice before they rush into courts to sue and sue government. And they say the same principle might be extended to other new deal projects such as the NRA, which is being harried by adverse decision after another.

ARE CONFIDENT
Rankin said he was confident President Roosevelt would approve his bill, adding "he and Senator

Norris and I never have been apart yet on this power question." The Norris-Rankin bill definitely puts the new deal on the offensive against its foes, and represents the first blow struck in retaliation for all the defeats suffered in the lower courts. On the defensive of the picture, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings announced today he was ready to defend NRA in the supreme court and hoped the issue would be joined before the present term of the court expired in June.

DOUBLE BILL
AT LOCAL FOX

The pop-eyed Eddie Cantor, favorite stage, screen and radio star, is drawing the crowds to the Fox theater in his latest extravaganza "Kid Millions." On the same bill is seen "Maybe It's Love."

Ann Southern, Ethel Merman, Warren Hymer, George Murphy, Block and Sully and 200 Goldwyn beauties prance along the Nile with Eddie in the tuneful tale of adventure in the Harem of the Sheik and the tombs of his fathers.

Five songs are featured in "Kid Millions," and are set against lavish and spectacular backgrounds with the Goldwyn girls singing and dancing to each number. "Mandy," the Irving Berlin hit that Eddie Cantor originally introduced in the Ziegfeld Follies in 1919, is revived in one of the elaborate song and girl numbers staged aboard the liner en route to Egypt. Two other songs by Cantor are "Okay Toots!" and "When My Ship Comes In." Ethel Merman "goes to town" in her rendition of "An Earthly Music," while Ann Southern and George Murphy make a romantic duet of "Your Head On My Shoulders" in the Crinoline number.

The elaborate "ice cream fantasy," a poor boy's dream come true in which Eddie, the millionaire, opens a free ice cream factory for boys and girls, is filmed entirely in technicolor.

"Maybe It's Love," showing on the same program offers a modern comedy of love and its complications, such as marriage, collectors, Grand Rapids furniture, conventions and blaws, with Gloria Stuart and Ross Alexander as the boy and girl involved and Frank McHugh, Joseph Cawthorn, Ruth Donnelly and others helping make the complications.

NURSE CLEARED
2 SMALL TOTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—UP—The tragic error of Kathleen Murphy, interne in Children's hospital here, in giving two small children fatal injections of poison instead of diphtheria antitoxin was "unintentional homicide," a coroner's jury found today.

Her face shocked and drawn, Miss Murphy told her story in four words:

"I misread the label." Her superiors testified her work previous to the mistake that caused the deaths of Lois Bowden and Natalia Rojnovsky, both five years old, had been "far above the average."

The jury's verdict cleared the young woman of criminal blame. "As an interne, she should not have been assigned the full responsibility for the operation of the department in the absence of a supervising head," the jury found. "She was largely incapacitated for duty on account of loss of sleep and overwork. This was largely responsible for her acknowledged mistake in reading the label."

Mosquito War
By Department

It's almost a fifty-fifty chance that the mosquito that bites you was born in your own backyard or in your neighbor's, city health officers said last night.

The health department is desirous of all the citizens of Richmond to help and cooperate by checking up on their backyards and premises, for standing water which might be in the least expected places, such as, water left standing in water vases inside houses, in barrels, in box drains, stopped-up roof gutters, ruins, flooded basements, pans, boilers, water-meter shut-off valves, water tanks, elevator pits, in cans, puddles near leaky faucets, wire barrels, dams in creeks, garden ponds not stocked with fish and abandoned wells.

Sanitary Inspector Herbert Blake with the aid of twenty men employed through the SERA project recently approved, has been widening and deepening present existing drainage ditches to allow a faster run-off of storm waters. Some of the deeper ponds that they are unable to drain, will be stocked with mosquito fish (Gambusia), thus preventing any breeding. All shallow ponds that are breeders have been oiled so as to prevent a flight before drying up.

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 28.—UP—Mysto the magician or Fred Keating and his vanishing bird cage would have succeeded nicely at the job.

But it's all in the day's work to Roy Krueger, who is just another of those adopt young men who head the property crews assigned to motion picture production units.

On five minutes' notice, he is called upon to get anything from a trained cat to a pack of Austrian solitaire cards.

Not only is he required to produce such oddities, but he succeeds in doing it without holding up production.

Just a few of the strange properties he had to secure for the Carl Brisson-Mary Ellis picture, "All the King's Horses" were: A Dachshund puppy, some needle-point embroidery, Austrian solitaire cards, a crested silver dinner service, a doberman, a majordomo's staff, revolvers, balloons, a roll of merry-go-round tickets and a full grown Schnauzer.

Of course the dogs were comparatively easy. He rented them from a kennel. But just try to find a solitaire deck. Roy finally discovered it by going over into the east side of Los Angeles where there is a large colony of Austrians. By means of much negotiation and pantomime, he induced a bearded Austrian section hand to part with his prized deck of cards.

The crested silver dinner service, wasn't so easy either. Of course it could have been made up in the property shops, but it wouldn't have been authentic. The service was eventually discovered in a Hollywood establishment that deals in antique silver. It once graced the tables of an Austrian baron.

But to Krueger, it's all in a day's work. "All the King's Horses" was a cinch," he says. "They might have asked me to get 'em some Egyptian reed birds for a pie like they did in 'Cleopatra'."

NEW YORK
INSIDE OUT
By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—A judge talked back to the other after all. He's the producer of "Three Men On A Horse" which is well on its way to fortune, gold clauses or no gold clauses.

Yokel was just a hard-working press agent a few months ago who believed in the depression. At the same time he was not a lad to take it lying down, and so he managed to scrape together $7,492.67, the exact sum necessary to mount a script which he picked up from the dusty shelves of play agents' offices. He found some inexpensive actors, some cheap scenery and he lighted up the playhouse with fingers crossed and a prayer in his heart.

The comedy went over with a bang. Yokel has collected $34,000 to date, advance sales are $40,000 more, and it looks as if he'll score away some $200,000 before the shoot ink is over.

Wall Street may be passe, but there's still Broadway suckers.

The reason the incident was only the latest in a series which had brought Judge Harris some rather unenviable publicity in recent years. He'd had enough.

DYNAMITE—It's rather unfortunate that Elizabeth Bergner's first American appearance should have been in Margaret Kennedy's "Escape Me Never!" the Theater Guild's current attraction. The play is mostly a sentimental and insignificant trifle that barely manages to give Miss Bergner an opportunity to show her stuff.

Which is too bad, for La Bergner is a unique player rarely encountered in the ranks of modern actresses. A frail figure, she has extraordinary strength and variety of mood and pace, and the subtlety of her technique is endlessly fascinating.

Audiences emerge from the Shubert Theater slightly bewildered these nights, wondering where Bergner's reputation comes from. If she manages to get hold of a real play for her next appearance, they'll find out.

The tiny German actress packs a load of dynamite, and when it does go off the country will hear the echoes of the explosion.

When Carol Morris' mother, a small-town dressmaker, suddenly dies, Carol sets out for New York to seek a career, though John Clark, who is in love with her, tries to dissuade her. In New York, she makes a brief appearance on the stage, but eventually takes a job in a department store, where she is soon promoted. Meanwhile, she has met the wealthy Ranny Sterling, who asks her to marry him, but Carol's one ambition is to have a career. She becomes a part of Ranny's group of friends, all of whom are successfully doing "interesting things," and when she one day bumps into Bette Silvers, a show girl who had left her when she first came to New York, she contrasts her unfavorably with her new friends.

CHAPTER XIV
CAROL rather enjoyed her lunch with Bette Silvers but when it was all over, she was glad she had made no arrangement to see the show girl soon again. She knew it was not kind of her but, at the same time, the contrast between Bette and, for instance, Dolly Winthrop, was too great to be entirely overlooked.

Bette's voice was loud, her gestures extravagant, her laughter almost raucous. By the time they were through luncheon, Carol felt that almost everyone in the restaurant was looking at them, and she was glad to get out into the street again.

And it was a good thing to get back to the good, hard common sense of Mr. Jackson's office, to take up details that required her attention. Gossip about what Mr. Saunders had said or Mr. Weymouth had done, or how Olive Olivet looked in her new evening dress, was not important to a girl whose foot was already planted on the first rung of the ladder of success.

But Bette Silvers was not the only old friend Carol was destined to meet that day. She was just getting ready to leave the office when she looked up to see John Clark, looking particularly tall and handsome, framed in the doorway. For a second, she was too astonished to speak.

HE GRINNED boyishly. "May I come into the holy of holies?" "Why, John! Wherever did you spring from? I thought you were thousands—well, at least a thousand—miles away! What's happened?"

"This is just a little surprise visit, that's all. Do you mind?" "Mind? I should say not! I'm simply delighted to see you!" He smiled with pleasure. "And it sure does my heart good to hear you say that."

Carol laughed happily. "You got here just in time. Another minute and I'd have been gone. How long are you going to be in town?"

"Just overnight. I'm here on a mission for the University. Then I've got to dash right back to Morristown."

"You do love Morristown, don't you, John?" "Of course I do. And I can't understand why you don't, too."

She shook her head. "I'm afraid it's hopeless to try to influence me. John, I can't admit to a particle of love for Morristown. I love New York. I like the way of life here. I like my friends here. But anyway, let's not talk about that, because I know you'd never agree with me in a million years. The main thing is, we'll have to rush if we're going to catch all the things I've got scheduled for this evening."

HE SMILED. "Now you know you haven't planned any main thing. How could you have planned when you didn't know I was coming?"

She laughed at him. "Well, I never heard such vanity in my life! Do you think that I just sit around all alone every evening wondering if you're going to pop into town?"

HE WITHDREW her hands from his grasp. "Well, I am built that way, John Clark," she said angrily. "If you won't come to the dinner party with me—well, it's just too bad, that's all!"

He looked at her steadily for a moment. Then, without a word, he turned on his heel and walked out of the office.

Will Decision
Is Upheld By
Supreme Court

MARTINEZ, Feb. 28.—A victory for the nephews and nieces of the late Constantino Lepori, Pittsburg financier, was registered today when the District Court of Appeals upheld the contention of Superior Judge A. B. McKenzie in the celebrated will fight which has been in the Contra Costa courts for eight years.

Under the first will, executed by Lepori, most of the estate, once valued at $400,000, would have gone to a grandchild, Carla Lepori. Mayor Hugh H. Donovan was named guardian of the grandchild in 1927 by the late Superior Judge F. V. Alvarado at the latter's suggestion.

A second will gave most of the estate to the nieces and nephews. Attorneys for the guardian contended that Lepori was of unsound mind when he signed the second document, which virtually cut off the grandchild.

Judge Wade Moore of Pittsburg, attorney for the guardian, said he would apply to the district court for a rehearing and, if the plea is denied he will carry the case to the supreme court.

Attorney A. B. Thinning and T. H. DeLap represented the nieces and nephews.

DRESSMAKER'S DAUGHTER
By James Noble Gifford

When Carol Morris' mother, a small-town dressmaker, suddenly dies, Carol sets out for New York to seek a career, though John Clark, who is in love with her, tries to dissuade her. In New York, she makes a brief appearance on the stage, but eventually takes a job in a department store, where she is soon promoted. Meanwhile, she has met the wealthy Ranny Sterling, who asks her to marry him, but Carol's one ambition is to have a career. She becomes a part of Ranny's group of friends, all of whom are successfully doing "interesting things," and when she one day bumps into Bette Silvers, a show girl who had left her when she first came to New York, she contrasts her unfavorably with her new friends.

Her laughter took the sting out of the words, but he did not join in her amusement. "No, I didn't think that," he said simply. "I couldn't very well think that when you haven't even answered my last three letters."

For a moment, she bit her lip in annoyance. When she was so glad to see him, why did John have to say a silly thing like that? She had always thought it was silly to hold a grudge against anyone for not answering letters.

John, seeing her annoyance, said hastily, "But don't think I'm mad. I know you've been awfully busy."

She grasped at the straw he offered her. "Well, John, I have been very busy, that's a fact."

He beamed. "Then you ought to be all the more ready for a jolly time tonight. You can pretend I'm the country cousin and you're showing me around the big city."

"And I really am going to show you around!" she said eagerly. "You are going to be here for only one evening, but it's going to be an evening you won't forget in a hurry. Ranny's giving a dinner party at a hotel, and then we're all going on to the opera. I'll bet you've never been to the opera. Now, confess, you haven't."

He looked crestfallen. "No; I've never been to the opera, but—Carol—"

"DON'T SAY but, John. I'll call Ranny right up and tell him I'm bringing you to the party. He'll love to have you. I'm sure."

She turned toward the telephone, but John caught her hand as she started to pick up the instrument.

"Who's Ranny?" "Now don't be silly. Of course you know who Ranny is. Ranny Sterling—the fat young man you met at the night club. Don't you remember? Then we went over to his table and met all those charming people."

"Charming people?" said John. "Why, I was just bored stiff."

She clasped her hand over his mouth with a laugh. "John, you mustn't say that. They're my very best friends now. And since you're coming to dinner with them and then to the opera, you'll just have to make the best of it."

"But I don't want to go to the opera. I want a chance to be alone with you. I want to talk to you."

"Oh, well, we'll have a chance to talk, between the acts or something. But I forgot. Have you your evening clothes or dinner clothes with you?"

HE TOOK both her hands firmly in his. "Yes, Carol, I have dinner clothes. But I'm not going to any party, and I'm not going to any opera. I just want to be with you. I'm only going to be in New York one night. You see these people all the time. You can put them off."

She looked at him in astonishment. "You mean I should not go to Ranny's party just because you're in town?"

"Yes. He still held her hands. "And just why should I do that, John Clark?"

"You ought to know why, Carol. Because I love you—and had hoped to have you to myself this evening."

She laughed lightly. "Well—Ranny loves me, too."

"Then you'll have to choose between us," he said stiffly. "But I don't want to choose between you, John. I like you both too much. I want you both for friends."

He shook his head. "No; it won't do. I'm not built that way, Carol."

AVERT TRAGEDY IN STRIKE OF ELECTRIC MEN

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 28.—UP.—Community tragedy was averted today when 150 striking employees of the El Paso Electric Company agreed to return to work, after 12 hours of complete electrical paralysis in El Paso and Juarez, Mex.

Residents of the twin cities had a taste of that tragedy, however, when hospitals were deprived of power and light in their operating rooms, in children's wards, and in laboratories.

Not an X-ray machine could be used. Sterilizing equipment was put out of business. Children, frightened, cried in the darkness until nurses brought them small flashlights.

For more than 12 hours, not a street car was running, there was no power for factories, and no electric lights for homes. Lamp, candles and improvised lights made from vaseline and cotton wicks, were used in households.

County Judge Joseph McGill and Mayor R. E. Sherman, the two officials chiefly responsible for the compromise, described the threat to life and safety that was created by the strike.

McGill said that three patients in the Hotel Dieu hospital, living in oxygen tents, faced death if power to operate the equipment was not restored at once.

The appeal to the strikers was successful. They had asked for union recognition and a closed shop, and in going back they won neither of their objectives.

The strikers and electric company officials approved, however, appointment of a "board of consideration" to arbitrate the matter.

WAR MOTHERS SEWING CLUB ENTERTAINED

The program included readings by Miss Emma Pearson and Mrs. Grace Masterson. The ladies gave a salute to the flag and all joined in singing "America."

After a delicious luncheon was served by the hostess, the group played cards and sewed. Prizes were won by Mrs. Lelia Osborne, Mrs. Ed Crane, Mrs. Gracie Cole, Mrs. Marie McNeil and Mrs. Adah Huber.

On behalf of the sewing club, Mrs. Anna Keaton presented F. W. Bradbury with a special award in token of the appreciation of the club for the interest he has taken in their affairs.

VAST HIGHWAY IN NORTHWEST NOW PLANNED

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 28.—UP.—A vast international highway, extending 13,000 miles from the Arctic through the tropics, across 14 nations, was a step nearer today, with passage by the U. S. Senate of the McNary bill.

The measure, introduced by Senator Charles McNary of Oregon, appropriated $2,100,000 to complete the highway from Fairbanks, Alaska, to the Yukon border, and to survey the route through Canadian territory. It is before the House of Representatives, sponsored by Alaska delegate Anthony J. Dimond.

Ultimate completion of the road will fulfill one of man's greatest dreams. It will permit a motorist to start at Circle City, Alaska, on the edge of the Arctic and drive to Buenos Aires.

The northwest saw more immediate benefits from the great, undeveloped areas of Alaska, Yukon and British Columbia land communication with the outside world. Total cost for that section would be approximately $14,000,000—$2,000,000 for Alaska, $4,000,000 for Yukon and $8,000,000 for British Columbia—a joint American-Canadian commission estimated after a preliminary survey.

Asahel Curtis, Seattle photographer and member of the International survey party, believed development of the resources of the region, facilitated by the road, soon would justify construction costs.

"William A. McKenzie, former British Columbia minister of mines, estimates there was at least $300,000,000 in undeveloped gold deposits in the northern part of the province," said Curtis.

"The route follows the 'placer belt' that extends from Idaho and Montana into the Arctic."

There are thousands of square miles of vacant land in Alaska, Yukon and Northern British Columbia suitable for agriculture, if markets were available, the survey found.

Growing seasons are short but intense, due to long hours of sunlight. Grain, vegetables and small fruits thrive. Curtis displayed photographs of Alaska, showing, with stalks four feet long and thick as a man's arm.

general claim of increased efficiency on the part of the supervisors is able to present figures showing what state supervision with appointive officials really means as compared with work done by elective county officials.

THE PROOF

Figures for Los Angeles county are typical. The state's expenditure on maintenance is $1.7 million amounts to $628.50 per mile. Los Angeles county succeeded in doing its maintenance work for $393 per mile, considerably less than one-half the state's cost. Los Angeles has one man employed for each 7 miles of road, while the state has a field force on a full time basis of one man per 3.2 miles. Los Angeles county's administrative costs average $19.40 per mile, while those of the State Highway Commission average $91.25 per mile.

It must be remembered that the state has 14,000 miles to maintain, much of it highly improved, which should cut maintenance costs. For that purpose the state has about $5,000,000 worth of equipment. The counties on the other hand, have 65,000 miles of road, much of it an unimproved nature, and they are maintaining these roads with about the same value of road equipment as the state.

"County supervisors are directly responsible to the people of their county and if they do not do the right thing they can be disciplined by removal from office. The Highway Commission, which is non-salaried, and serves at the pleasure of the governor, is subject to no such control."

"Probably Mr. Kelly will claim that the supervisors are fighting his proposal because it would remove from them some of their political patronage. But by what sort of political magic would the State Department of Public Works be immune to the odium of patronage? It has become so in late years that the Director of Public Works is the most powerful figure in the state administration."

"The supervisors are not going to sit back and passively permit the State Department of Public Works to acquire a dictatorial, centralized jurisdiction over local roads. They believe that those who spend funds for local roads should remain closely responsive to the wishes of the taxpayers. These are some of the reasons why the supervisors will bitterly oppose Kelly's plan."

ed at the home of Mrs. Grace Craig, 1112 Nevin avenue today. Business matters will be discussed and a social will be enjoyed. All members have been urged to attend.

Leprosy, While Contagious, Is Not As Horrible As the Average Person Believes

OUR first thought at the mention of leprosy is one of horror and repugnance, and then we think, "Oh well, it is a disease of China and India, and other far countries and we need not fear it." This attitude is scarcely justifiable, as the disease is not confined to those countries.

Leprosy is one of the oldest known diseases, being known many centuries before the Christian era, and frequently mentioned in the Old Testament. True, it is common in India, China, Eastern and Southern Europe, as well as Egypt and South America, but it is not uncommon along our southern borders.

The States of Louisiana and California support a large leprosy colony and the disease is quite often seen along the Mexican border. There are probably many unrecorded cases all along our sea board. We always think of leprosy as an unclean disease and it is true that filthy surroundings and poor hygienic conditions are almost necessary for its spread.

The comparative freedom of the United States from the disease is another thing for which we must thank our Board of Health and the United States Health Service. Leprosy has always followed immigration and has frequently spread all over Europe, especially at the time of the Crusades.

THE constant presence of leprosy in China and Japan is one of the reasons why California fought so hard to have the immigration of these races into the United States prohibited. Most of us know very little about leprosy and it is a pity we would all feel that a leper even touched us we would be contaminated.

This feeling is not justifiable. It is a contagious disease, but simple contact is not enough; as witness those doctors and nurses who work and live among the lepers for years and do not contract the disease. It is carried in the discharges from the nose and throat or it might be contracted by the discharges from the ulcers coming in contact with an open wound on our persons, but reasonable care with good hygiene offers sufficient protection.

These countries which have required isolation of known cases and compelled careful destruction of the body discharges of the patients, have stopped the spread of the trouble. It is a slowly developing disease, usually starting with fever, headache, backache, pains in the muscles and joints, and a nasal discharge.

This is followed by nodules of various sizes occurring in the skin, particularly on the face, back of hands, and arms, legs and feet. The progress is usually slow, gradually spreading and then quieting down for a time; then more fever and a period of progress.

IT OCCURS in several forms, sometimes attacking the nerve trunks with extreme pain, enlargement of the nerve with nodules along its course of the nerve. There is gradual shrinking up and loss of power in the muscles of an arm or foot.

The skin over these nodules or ulcers is of a gray or brown, and a very red color. The face, lips and nose become puffy, and irregularly outline producing a very disagreeable appearance. These lumps appear in the mouth, nose, on the ears, and finally some of them break down causing deep, sloughing ulcers.

These are so hideous that the patient usually keeps the face covered and causes a feeling of great dread and horror of the affliction. The disease lasts for many years, often ten, fifteen, twenty, and more, till finally the patient dies of exhaustion, blood poisoning, or consumption.

Fortunately a cure is under way, or at least leprosy is under control by a new remedy. Pure chaulmoogra oil is taken internally, alone or in combination with other drugs, or is injected into the muscles two or three times a week. Many cases are cured and in others all visible signs have disappeared. It is being used in the leper colonies of the Hawaiian Islands with excellent results.

Concerning Questions Dr. Christian offers readers the privilege of addressing questions to him care of this paper. He will answer questions of general interest in his regular daily column on this page.

OLD PERMANENT REVITALIZED BY USE OF POMADE

By JACQUELINE HUNT

THE close of January usually brings a feeling of restlessness. There is a lull between the gay holiday parties and the renewed social activities of mid-February, and you are apt to look in your mirror a bit more critically than you have for many weeks. Hair is usually first to demand your attention.

Most of you who had a permanent during the fall will find that it is now growing out and beginning to lose its pep. Usually it is not wise to get a new permanent until the old has almost disappeared so you may like to know that it is possible to revitalize the hair and to coax back much of its original curliness without prolonging the life of your old permanent by several weeks.

If your hair is stringy and unmanageable soon after you shampoo get a tube of pomade or toilet lanoline for conditioning the scalp and giving your hair luster and body and get some of the stout-springed little clipper to trim the ends of your hair.

First brush and comb your hair thoroughly to remove any particles of lint or dead skin, then make a part about an inch and a half above your right ear and extending to the hairline at the back of your neck. Pin the rest of the hair aside, then take the tube of pomade or lanoline and squeeze a little into the part. Use the fingertips to work the preparation well into the scalp on each side of the part.

Part the hair again about an inch and a half further up and repeat the application of corrective salve, continue until the entire scalp has been treated. Finally apply additional lanoline or pomade around the hairline and vigorously massage the entire scalp, emphasizing the special emphasis to the hairline areas that are so often neglected and where dandruff first appears.

Your next step is to apply steam to soften and dampen the hair so it will absorb the oil and waves and curls will reappear. If you have plenty of time, it is best to wash with a heavy towel of hot water and wrap a permanent discolored towel over the damp one and leave on the head for five minutes or more.

If you want your hair to dry more quickly afterwards, simply lay your wash basin with very hot water, bend over it and cover your head with a heavy towel. Steam, massage with one hand during the steaming. This method takes longer, but your hair will be less damp when you are finished.

Now you are ready for putting in the waves and ringlets, I will tell you how in tomorrow's column.

Star Designs Feature the New Cottons Headed This Way for the Spring Season

By IRENE VAIL

New York—Star designs continue to illuminate some of the best-looking cottons advanced for spring. They appear not only on such sheers as organdies and dimities, the latter advocating the idea of reverse colored grounds, but also in piques, including novelty constructions. Further evidence of interest in the appearance of the moon in crescent and fuller shape on sports weaves. The fashion for this character of prints should find some stimulation in the growing interest in spot motifs spaced over a virgin ground.

Floral effects are sharing in the interest with spaced motifs and appear in ray multicolors on white fields. There are many more flower subjects than a year ago at this time. While as yet the demand has not been unusual for them, buyers are said to be ordering in limited quantities, believing that the interest will strengthen in them as we progress into the spring. They are seen not alone on sheer grounds, but also on plaque and other sports constructions, adaptable to making of little jackets or capes to complement plain dresses.

Sketched today the beret at top left is of heavily ribbed black ottoman, threaded with gold and trimmed with a twist of gold yarn. The pillbox toque is of black tulle set on a bandeau and trimmed with two quills.

The third shape illustrates the baby crown which are being placed on top of ordinary crowns to give height; this model is brown felt.

At right of the column a three-quarter length coat in bark fabric is made with very full swaggar back and interest centers on the yoke and "tulip" collar in stitched taffeta. The flared cuffs follow the general theme of the collar.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "Our washbowl in the bathroom is stained from hair dye. The stained color is blue and blackish. Please tell me how to take out the stain.—A Reader."

Have you tried household ammonia or scrubbing with an abrasive powder to remove the stains? I suspect the stains were caused by a hair dye containing silver nitrate. In this case apply a 10 per cent solution of Sodium Hydroxide (warm) and let stand for fifteen minutes, then scrub with soap and water. Repeated use of hair dyes of this type may lead to a permanent discoloration of the skin so I would advise you to be very cautious. Leave your hair its natural color of have it dyed by an experienced operator.

QUESTION: "Please tell me how I can look nice when I have almost nothing to spend for cosmetics or permanents or clothes. I live in a little factory town and nearly all that we make goes to the support of a large family.—Pat."

First of all guard your health jealously. Through the proper diet, the right amount of exercise, fresh air and cleanliness you can have a clear skin, sparkling eyes and soft, glossy hair with a minimum of outside beauty aids. Learn to wave your own hair skillfully or wear it straight in some simple style that is easy to manage. When you do buy cosmetics, remember that it is usually more economical to buy cold creams in the large pound jars and tins in the quart bottles.

Tasty and Nourishing Dishes for Today Vitamins Should Be Studied By Those Living Modern Way

By JUDITH WILSON

SO MUCH talk about vitamins may be confusing to a great many of you who grew up in the days when vitamins were unknown except to a few scientists and nutrition experts. Grandmother is still apt to snort indignantly, "I raised six healthy babies and nobody told me about vitamins." Perhaps she did, but what grandmother overlooks is that mothers of living have changed.

When people lived busy outdoor lives with a reasonably varied fare there was little danger of vitamin deficiency. Even so, in sections where living standards were low and where the diet was limited, a great many did suffer from deficiency diseases and still do in spite of the efforts that schools and social agencies are making to educate mothers to the importance of a well-balanced, vitamin-rich diet.

First we should review the vitamins—the principal ones—and see the common sources and the part they play in building sturdy bodies and sound teeth and bones. Here is a vitamin-alphabet that will help you remember them:

A is the anti-infective vitamin that prevents and cures winter colds and builds the resistance to other common diseases and even local infections. B is the builder. It stimulates the appetite and helps A do its work. C cures and prevents certain unpleasant deficiency diseases like scurvy. D you might say is the doctor and dentist. This vitamin builds sound teeth and bones, and builds resistance to disease. There are something like a half-dozen more vitamins that play important parts in the normal functioning of the body, but these are plentiful in most foods and you needn't worry about them.

Vitamin D is the one that concerns us most in the winter time. During the summer a plentiful supply of vitamin is formed in the body by the action of sunlight on certain substances in the skin. This vitamin cannot be stored, however, and in the winter it is wise to include in the diet irradiated foods and cod-liver or halibut liver oil.

With the exception of vitamin D, fruits and vegetables are the best sources of the vitamins, especially those which can be eaten raw, since cooking destroys vitamin C and vitamin B is water soluble and may be lost through the liquid in which the vegetable is cooked.

Whole grains are rich in vitamin B which explains why growing youngsters and grown-ups too, need a plentiful supply of cereal foods in the diet. Yellow cornmeal, oatmeal and whole wheat or other grain cereals are good sources of this vitamin B so we must turn to other sources. The richest of these are nuts and protein-rich vegetables like beans, peas and lentils. Milk contains the vitamins except vitamin D, which is sometimes added to a generous amount of vitamin D, however, by regulating the food supply of the cow. Unless you know that you are buying vitamin D milk, supplement the diet of young children with orange juice and cod-liver oil.

Eggs are valuable sources of vitamins A and B and some D which are held in the yolk. Where a limited amount of milk is available in the diet, eggs and butter are the best substitutes. Vitamin C which is one of the most important, is found in liberal quantities only in the citrus fruits like oranges, grapefruit and lemon and tomatoes and tender, young cabbage. Other fruits and vegetables contain vitamin C in lesser quantities. If you can afford it, take one raw salad and one citrus fruit or tomato juice each day.

You and Your Child LONE CHILD IN LARGE FAMILY EASILY SPOILED

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

MARY ANN is a child of four, the only child in a family of five adults—mother, father, grandmother, grandfather and an uncle. For Mary Ann, therefore, it is as if she had five doting parents. Consequently she is a very knowing child. That is, she is at least one and a half times as knowing as the average child with only two parents in the family and all of them at home, it would be foolish to give up crying when a little persistence could win a sympathetic response before long.

This time, however, not one of the five adults in the household held weakened. No credit is due them because each just happened to be engrossed at the time in some pursuit of his own. "Won't somebody stop that child?" uncle called down from his room upstairs. "What all Mary Ann?" grandfather inquired from the cellar. Grandmother shook her head. She would have spoken, but had to keep her mind on knitting or lose count of the stitches.

Mary Ann continued wailing, a querulous note in her voice. It was nerve wracking, and when dad could not stand it any longer, he put his book aside and turned to mother. "Give her a cookie; that ought to make her stop crying."

A deep sob came from Mary Ann. "Yes," she said with feeling, "give her a cookie." Good old dad! That was just the point. Give her a cookie. Do something. Anything. But show some respect for the feelings of Mary Ann. She is accustomed to getting her own way. Don't disappoint her now.

There was no cookie for Mary Ann this time. And nothing further was said because everyone was trying hard to keep from laughing. Finally Mary Ann stopped crying, anyway, unaware that in giving herself away she had taught her parents a lesson.

Avoid Starchy Limas When you buy lima beans avoid them if they are yellowish or well rounded, as this usually indicates that they are overmature and will be starchy rather than tender.

When dresser drawers stick, if the parts that stick are rubbed with paraffin or laundry soap, they won't.

If you like variety, try serving wedges of lime instead of lemon next time you have oysters or other sea foods.

MODERN WOMEN

By C. N. CHRISMAN, M.D.

Deploing the Tendency Of Women to Regiment Their Clothes Ideas Into A Boring Sameness

VISITORS in New York important enough to be interviewed on their impressions of the place and its people, invariably pay a tribute to its women. It is usually some sort of remark about their clothes. That's some thing of course, but shouldn't a woman over-sharpen her clothes? Shouldn't her personality count, and shouldn't she be able to survive and dominate over the burden of her mind?

Otherwise she is just another woman, who to the casual observer, looks like virtually every other mink-clad lady.

It seems too bad that women run so true to form. It would be a much more interesting world and a far better panorama were women to decide what they wanted to wear instead of contenting themselves by copying the style leader, and doing their best to look exactly like her.

Each season brings to the metropolis some sort of uniform, some type of dress or coat, and every woman who has the price rushes out to get herself one just like the others. Mink coats are the winter uniform of New York, and the woman who hasn't one feels that she is being cheated of her birthright. She derives what consolation she can out of the fact that there are less costly coats deserving of being adapted as uniforms, too. One year it's the silver fox collared coat, as it is this year, another it is the Persian lamb collared coat, an also-ran this year. But where's the woman with any pretense to style who would sail forth in ermine trimmings were ermine trimmings out.

IT NEVER seems to occur to the young modern, or her mother, that there is anything in being distinctive. They appear to think that they must look as alike as the proverbial two peas or they are unworthy of notice. It's a curious viewpoint. Nature sets no example of repeating the same model over and over again. Nature's repetitions have always some distinguishing marks, but by the time the beautician and the stylist get through with a woman, she has become as much like her sister as it is possible for these enterprising persons to make them.

And as time goes on women seem more and more inclined to submerge themselves and their personalities by wearing clothes that are copies of every other woman's clothes. It's really the trend, and if you are curious at all as to its genesis, I think you will agree that it's because women have appeared to solve the clothes problem as nearly as can be solved by standardizing their apparel. Women see no particular reason for not following their lead.

THERE'S a big difference, though, in the way it works out. Men's clothes, though ugly, (at least I think so) are practical. They're chosen for hard and long usage, and are unaffected by the capricious winds of fashion. They change in cut and color, of course, but so very gradually that the change is hardly perceptible, and certainly does not call for a complete new wardrobe every spring or autumn.

Women do not follow along with a fashion because it's a "classic," as the French call a fashion which is more or less always good. They are quick to adopt as uniform something that is ultra and absurd, something that cannot and should not outlive a season.

No one wants to dress in defiance of fashions, but no one should want to follow fashion blindly. In order to make any sort of impression it seems reasonable to suppose that one must not run with the pack, or become merely a part of a composition picture.

Each year imaginative men and women launch new lines and new ideas in clothes. It must be dreary, uphill work for those of them who really aim to make women lovelier, since we are so inclined to be a reflection of some woman whom we admire, but may not resemble. Why, in fact, then, that her clothes are the clothes for you? We all incline toward this illogical reasoning.

Abrasive Found In Manifold Of The Winnie Mae

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28.—UP—Laboratory specialists tonight found metal filings and "a quantity of emery and similar abrasives" in an intake manifold of Wiley Post's monoplane, Winnie Mae.

Tests were made by A. R. Mass, of Pacific Airmotive, in charge of repairs and the plane, to determine what caused the oil line leak that forced down Post's plane last Friday on a projected flight across the continent.

The filings were in the manifold between the supercharger and the engine. Experts said they did not believe the filings had got there unless someone placed them in the manifold.

Justice Holmes Critically Ill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Fear for the life of former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was evidenced today with the use of oxygen to combat the ravages of illness.

Three tanks of the life prolonging gas were taken into his residence a short while after Dr. Thomas A. Clayton announced: "The Justice is ill and at his age an illness is serious."

The Justice's next birthday is March 8, when he will be 94.

Indulging in that sport when arrested by the city marshal, Payne had also knocked in a store front just as an afterthought.

SUSPECT TO FACE MURDER COMPLAINTS

She died in convulsions in Sunnyvale, Santa Clara county, January 17, 1928, and the attending doctor had asked for a pathological examination, which was never made.

The first wife, Mrs. Tillie Gordon Gore, is young and attractive and lives with her second husband, James Gore, in Santa Clara. She left Gordon because he threatened her life, she said.

IS DEFIANT
Confronted with these facts and startlingly corroborative evidence, Gordon assumed a defiant attitude in the Alameda County Jail yesterday.

"Go ahead and charge me," he said to Warren, "and see how far you get with it."

"He will be placed under murder indictment," said Warren, "and there will be plenty of startling revelations before we are through."

STRANGE DEATH
These were the elements of one of the strangest death mysteries which had confounded police and county authorities for years.

Gordon married his first wife on August 25, 1921, in San Jose. She lived with him three years and then left him because, she says, he had threatened her life. Gordon obtained an annulment on September 23, 1925, on the grounds his wife was a minor at the time of the marriage.

He married his second wife just three months before she died in January, 1928. He had tried, it is charged, to insure the life of his second wife without her knowledge and without a medical examination.

POISON CASE
The night that she died at their home in Sunnyvale, he summoned Dr. Talley Watson, who arrived only 20 minutes before she died. Dr. Watson refused to sign the death certificate, declaring "it looked like a poison case," but the autopsy showed evidence of pneumonia. Strychnine poisoning gives indications resembling pneumonia, according to the doctor.

After his second wife's death, Gordon is said to have attempted to collect the insurance and discovered the company had refused the policy.

Gordon embarked on his third marital venture and a child was born, James, now 4 years old.

DIED NOVEMBER 20
The third wife was stricken on November 20 last. Just as in the previous case, Gordon did not call a physician until a few minutes before his wife died, according to investigators. The physician, Dr. Milton Ream of San Leandro, asked Gordon why he had not been called earlier, and Gordon told him that his wife didn't want him to leave her and they had no telephone.

The autopsy named pneumonia again as the cause of death. Gordon moved to the Ninety-sixth avenue address and employed the Sanborn girl. Police say he commenced relations with her immediately.

COLLECTED INSURANCE
Meanwhile, police say, Gordon attempted to collect a $1000 insurance policy he had taken out on his wife, but the insurance company refused payment.

Then came the revelations about the Sanborn girl, two persons were arrested for performing an illegal operation and she named Gordon as the man responsible.

Gordon was at liberty on the charge of contributing to her delinquency when the investigation led to the amazing revelations about his previous wives.

As additional evidence, Police Inspectors Lou Jewell and James Goodnight, say relatives told them of Gordon's threatening his third wife and beating her. She came to them in fear for her life, they said.

POLICE LINKED WITH RACKETS BY STATE SEN.

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 28.—UP—Charges that many police departments, apparently are linked with racketeers in California's beer industry were made here today as State Senator Thomas Scollon, member of a special senate committee investigating the industry, returned to the capitol.

Scollon's charges were coupled with predictions that the state ultimately will be forced to take over the enforcement of liquor laws with out recourse to assistance from local authorities.

As the legislative inquiry into conditions in the beer and wine industries in southern California was concluded, Scollon said it appeared necessary that beer distributors be placed under the same control as brewers.

Under such a program, he said, every package of wine would carry its vintage date and place of origin, and every so-called "barrel house" would be exposed.

Unregulated distribution, Scollon charged, is an "exponent" responsible for the "racketeering" conditions at present existing. Many police departments he charged are "in the play."

The present practice of some wineries in selling new wine with old made it necessary that all wine be properly labeled or the industry "would ruin itself," the senator contended.

AGED WOMAN TELLS STORY OF JOURNEY

of Mrs. Jackson, will be re-narrated again.

NEAR COLLAPSE
When Mrs. Jackson left the grand jury room, she was in a state of near-collapse. Although she will be 85 years of age the first day of July of this year she is mentally alert and in extraordinary physical condition. The nervous strain incidental to her extended session before the jury, however, severely taxed her strength.

MRS. JACKSON'S STORY
"I do not wish to make trouble for anyone," the aged lady said, "but I feel that I have not been treated right and therefore these who are to blame must take the consequences."

Q—"First tell us when you came back to California from the home of your niece at Moffat, Colorado."

A—"I arrived in El Cerrito a week ago Monday. The reason I returned was that my niece who lives on a farm, near Moffat, has four children, three girls and a boy and is not in financial circumstances to look after anyone else. In addition it was cold there, and I longed for my little home in El Cerrito, the one I willed to the county."

Q—"Where is the home located?"

A—"At 1331 Everett street, El Cerrito. It has four rooms and was very comfortably furnished and I was very happy there."

Q—"How did you happen to give it up and go to Colorado?"

A—"I really do not know. I never knew I was going to Colorado. When I was put on the train by Mrs. Booth I had no idea of my destination, but after two or three hours I inquired of the conductor and he replied that my ticket called for Moffat, Colorado."

Q—"Describe fully the events of the day of your departure."

A—"Mrs. Booth came to my house and took me to the office of the Social Service Department in Richmond. There I was put in a room and left for quite a while, but for what reason I do not know. Later Mrs. Booth came and got me and we went down the street to the office of an attorney where I signed a will transferring my home to the county."

Q—"Did you read the will and acquaint yourself with its contents?"

A—"No, they told me what was in it and all I did was to sign the paper."

Q—"Do you actually know of your own knowledge the contents of the paper you signed?"

A—"No."

Q—"How did it happen that you became the recipient of county aid?"

A—"My nephew, Calvin Toplift told me about it and suggested that I apply."

Q—"And you did so?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"With what result?"

A—"I was given $10 a month at first and got along very nicely on it in my little home. Then it was increased to $25 a month, but why I do not know as I had not asked for the larger amount. I thought it was very kind of the people to do that for me, without any solicitation."

Q—"Did you ever ask to be sent to the home of your niece, Mrs. John Farnham at Moffat, Colorado?"

A—"No, I never did. However, I did say that when the time came I did have to go somewhere I would like to make my home with this niece."

Anniversary Of Funeral Parlor Now Celebrated

Friends yesterday were congratulating Peter E. McLaughlin, Jr., on the tenth anniversary of the firm of Peter E. McLaughlin, Jr., Company, well known San Francisco mortuary parlor.

McLaughlin is a well known Richmond man. He resided in the city for 23 years before entering the undertaking business in San Francisco. For some time he was employed by the Standard Oil Company and was later an employee of William & Kratzer, local morticians.

McLaughlin opened his business on March 1, 1925, at 324 Guerrero street, San Francisco. On January 26, 1929, he moved to a new and specially designed building at 435 Dabcoe avenue. This building is considered one of the finest mortuaries in the west. The establishment is equipped with the most modern facilities.

In its ten years of existence, the firm has become one of the leading establishments in the state of California. It now serves some of the most prominent families in the state.

McLaughlin had it in a bureau drawer of my home. My furniture was taken away while I was in Richmond with Mrs. Booth and I have never seen it since.

Q—"Tell us fully what further occurred the day you left for Colorado."

A—"Mrs. Booth came to my house that day and took me to the Central Savings Bank in Oakland, where I drew out some money. I think it was $35. I had $133 on deposit there. While we were on the trip my nephew went to my house and took all the furniture. Mrs. Booth took me to her office, placed me in an inside room and left me there for quite a while. Then we went to an attorney's office where I signed the will. Later Mrs. Booth took me to dinner. We had something to drink, but I do not know what it was. Then she drove me to the depot and my nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Toplift were there. I was put on the train but had no idea as to my destination until the conductor told me. My niece in Moffat, Colorado, Mrs. John Farnham, says she is willing to make an affidavit that I arrived there in a dazed condition."

Q—"Did you receive any money from the social welfare department after you reached Moffat, Colorado?"

A—"I do not remember receiving any."

RE-TAKING TESTIMONY
The reason the grand jury is summoning many of the witnesses again who appeared before it the night Mrs. McCord was dismissed from her position as social service director, is because of the presence of the members of the Board of Supervisors in the grand jury room on that occasion. The court has advised the jury that by reason of the presence of the board there that the testimony then taken could not be used on which to predicate action of any kind, as outsiders are barred by law from the sacred precincts of the inquisitorial body. It therefore becomes necessary to again take rings I wanted it back and Mrs. Booth got it and returned it to that momentous date.
